CHAPTER VIII.
Into The Night.

Harris and Allan drove straight to the engine, never looking back to see what became of the hired man. On the way the farmer explained to his son what had taken place; that words had passed between them, but no blows had been struck, until Allan appeared on the scene.

"Well, if that's the way of it, I'm sorry I hit him," said the young man, frankly. "And when I see him I'll tell him so. I plugged him a good one, though, to be honest, he was hardly on his feet. But he sure landed me a stem-winder on the chin," he continued, ruefully rubbing that member. "So I guess we're about even."

"He might've broke your neck," said Harris. "You're too hot-headed, both of you. . . I can't make out what got into Jim, that he wouldn't answer a civil question. Jim was a good man, too. . . Perhaps the disturbing suggestion entered Harris's mind that the question he was asked was too civil, and he was really beginning to feel that after all Jim might be the aggrieved party. But he crushed down such meditation promptly. "It don't matter how good a man he was," he declared, "as long as I pay the piper I'm goin' to call the tune."

"It puts us up against it as a waterman, though," says Allan thoughtfully. "So it does," admitted Harris, who up to that moment had not reflected that his hasty action in dismissing Travers would result in much more delay than anything else that had occurred. "Well, we'll have to get somebody else. We'll manage till noon, and then you better ride over to Grant's or Morrison's. They'll be able to lend a man or one of the boys for a day or two." It was significant that although Harris was planning a considerable venture with files, when he wanted a favour his thought instinctively turned to his other neighbours, Grant and Morrison.

At noon Jim's chair was vacant, and the family had down to dinner amid a depressing silence. No men were made of the morning's incident until the meal was well advanced, when Harris, feeling that he ought in some way to introduce the subject, said: "Is Jim gone?"

"Yes, he's gone," mazed Beulah. "You didn't expect he'd wait to kiss you good-bye, did you?"

"One in the family is enough for that treatment," put in Allan, whose swollen chin and stiff neck biased him against Travers.

"He didn't, either. And if he did it's none of your business, you big —," she looked her brother straight in the face, her swollen eyes telling their own story, and repeated deliberately, "you big coward."

Allan bit his lip. "You're about the only person Beulah—that could say that and get off with whole skin. I suppose he told you I hit him before he was on his feet."

W. N. U. 1388

"Well, he didn't. He didn't say you hit him at all, but he couldn't deny it, so we knew the truth. And we knew you must have taken some mean advantage, or you'd never have got near enough to leave a mark on him."

"Jim's quite a hero, all right. It's too bad he's gone." "It's a good job he's gone," said Harris. "By the way Beulah talks things have gone far enough. I don't want any daughter marrying a farmer."

"Her grandmother's daughter did," said Mary Harris.

"Yes, I know, but things are different now. Look for something better for Beulah."

It was characteristic of Harris, as of thousands of others, that, although a farmer himself, he looked for "something better" for his daughter. He was resigned to Allan being a farmer; his intimate, daily realisation with his son shrank from any possibility of separation. But for his daughter—no. He had mapped out no career for her; she might marry a doctor, lawyer, merchant, tradesman, even a minister, but not a farmer. It is a peculiarity of the agriculturist that, among all professions, he holds his own in the worst repute. As a class he has educated himself to believe that everybody else makes an easy living off the farmer, and, much as he may revile the present generation for doing so, he is anxious that his children should join in the good plekking. In later years has come a gradually broadening conception that farming, after all, calls for brains as well as muscle, and that the man who can wrestle a successful living from Nature has as much right to hold up his head in the world as the experimenter in medicine or the lawyer playing hide-and-seek with Justice through the cracks in the Criminal Code. Herein is a germ of the cityward migration, and the farmer himself is looking for "something better" for his children.

"Jim was a good man," persisted his wife. "Don't you think you were—well, perhaps, a little hasty with him?"

Harris sat back. It was his wife's business to agree. For twenty years and more she had been faithful in the discharge of that duty. That she should suggest an opinion out of harmony with his indicated a lack of discipline, not very serious, perhaps, but a seed which, if permitted to flourish, might develop to dangerous proportions.

"And you're goin' to take his part, too? It's a strange thing if I can't handle my hired help without advice from the house."

Mary flushed at the remark. Any one quarrelled with her husband, especially before the children—for she still thought of the man and woman to her left and right as "the children"—was more painful to her than any submission could have been. It would be so much easier to change the subject, to follow the line of least resistance, and forget the incident as quickly as possible. That had been her constant policy after the first few years of their married life. At first there had been troubles and difficulties, but she had gradually adjusted herself to her niche, and their lives had run smoothly together because she never interrupted the current of his. But of late the conviction had been coming home to her that some time, somewhere, she must make a stand. It was all very well meekly to fall in line as long as only her own happiness was concerned, but if the future of her children should be at stake, she would not let her dealings with others should be the issue, then she would have to fight, and fight it out to a finish. And, quite unbidden, a strange surge of defiance welled in her when her husband so frankly told her to mind her own business.

"I was under the impression you were managing this farm together, you and I and John," she said very calmly, but with a strange ring in her voice. "When we came West I understood it was to build our home. I didn't know it was just to be your home."

The look of surprise with which Harris greeted her words was absolutely genuine. A hot, stinging retort sprang to his lips, but by a sudden effort he suppressed it. His wife's challenge, quiet, unflinching, but with evidence of unbending character behind it, in some way conjured something out of the past, and he saw her again, the greying locks restored to their youthful glory and the careworn cheek adorned with the bloom of young maidenhood as they had been in the gathering shadows that night when they swore to build their own home, and live their own lives, and love each other, always, only, for ever and ever.

And yet, to let her defiance go unchecked, to have his authority challenged before his own children, it would be the beginning of dissolution, the first crumbling of collapse.

"We will talk about that some other time, Mary," he said. "If Jim had answered any question fairly, as he had a right to, instead of beating around the bush, I might've let him off. But when I wanted to know what kept him he simply parried me, making a foot of me and rubbin' it in with that infernal smile of his."

"So that's what started it?" exclaimed Beulah. "Well, I'll tell you what kept him, if he wouldn't. The cattle got into the oats through a break in the fence, and I couldn't get them out, and the dog went k-i-s-s-i-n-g over the prairie after a rabbit, and just as I was beginning to—to condense over Honest Advertising.

THIS is a topic we all hear now-a-days because so many people are inclined to exaggerate. Yet has any physician told you that we claimed unreasonable remedial properties for Fletcher's Castoria? Just ask them. We won't answer it ourselves, we know what the answer will be.

That it has all the virtues to-day that was claimed for it in its early days is to be found in its increased use, the recommendation by prominent physicians, and our assurance that its standard will be maintained.

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Honestly advertised as such, without a claim for more than its over 30 years of use have amply proven. A Baby's remedy for Babies. And not an adult's remedy for all the family and all the ails that human flesh is heir to.

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

It Jim came up and saved the situation. What if he did keep your old engine waiting? There are more important things than ploughing."

"Aha!" said Harris, knowingly. "Well, I guess it's just as well it happened as it did. Jim was gettin' altogether too good at runnin' at your heels."

"That's all the thanks he gets for working late and early like an other hired man in the district. All right. You and Allan can milk the cows to-night, for I won't—see?"

Harris was accustomed to his daughter's frankness, and as a rule paid little regard to it. He was willing enough to be flayed, in moderation, by her keen tongue; in fact, he took a secret delight in her unstrained sallies, but that was different from defiance. He could, and did, submit to any amount of cutting repartee, and felt a sort of pride in her vigour and recklessness, but he had no notion of countenancing open mutiny, even from Beulah.

"We'll talk about that some other time, too," he said. "And you'll milk the cows to-night as usual."

Beulah opened her lips as though to answer, but closed them again, arose, and walked out of the kitchen. For her the controversy was over; the die was cast. Her nature, admitted of any amount of disputation up to a certain point, but when the irresistible force crashed into the immovable object she wasted no wind on words. With her war was over.

Note and Comment

It is a common complaint that our modern civilization is machine made, that it tends to crush out individuality.

Persons of a reactionary turn of mind talk about the "good old days," when everything in the household was beautiful because it was made by somebody who had the artist's pride in his work. Nowadays they say nearly all utilities are put out in bulk and ugliness reigns supreme.

It was some such idea as this that led Harry Adams, one of the great Americans of his period, to despair of the time in which he lived and turn his attention to the builders of the old Gothic Cathedrals.

William Morris, the poet and designer, who thought that he had reformed the insides of modern houses, had the same idea.

Both Morris and Adams, like many others, were obsessed with the notion of "Merrie England" and "Merrie France," and wished that we could recover some of the characteristics of the remote past.

But it is very easy to carry this sort of thing too far.

The fact is there never was a "Merrie England" and "Merrie France." There never was a period when work was play or when the mass of people lived in a sort of kindergarten in which toil was fun.

Buildings that are now the most admired ruins visited by tourists were put up when want and misery marked the lives of all but a few. Even the luxuries of the well-to-do were of the very crudest kind.

Take the picturesque time of Joan of Arc!

Nothing could exceed the misery in which the people existed in that century. War was not an occasional necessity but a regular occupation. The unfortunate peasants were in daily and nightly terror of the great nobles who, when they were not plundering their foes, were robbing their own people.

In fact, it was not much worse to have a visit from soldiers of the enemy than from those who were supposed to be friendly.

Cattle and goods were about as safe in one case as in the other. The gibbets at the cross roads did not warn people not to steal, but did warn them not to do so unless they were strong enough to avoid facing the consequences.

Villon, the greatest French poet of the time, was a friend of hold-up men and gangsters. It is wonderful that he was able to do his work when he was in peril of the hangman all the time.

It is equally a wonder that the beautiful things of the period were produced by workmen who must have lived from hand to mouth. It was a time when nobody had rights but those who were strong enough to enforce them.

After all, there are many compensations in being alive now, and progress is more than a mere word, in spite of the romantic.

If a fellow tries to kiss a girl and gets away with it, he is a man. If he tries and doesn't get away with it, he is a brute. If he doesn't try but could get away with it if he did try, he is a coward. If he doesn't try and wouldn't get away with it if he did try, he is a wise man.

Never speak harshly of one who is absent. Somebody might tell them.

Explanation that the high price of shoes is due to the heavy overhead fails to satisfy. The number of us who wear our shoes overhead is extremely limited.

A Manitoba woman who appears to be able to only say "yes," is charged with being insane. It is generally felt that there's something seriously wrong with any woman who can't even change her mind once in a while.

The world is full of will people—some willing to work, and the rest willing to let them.

We have made arrangements with the E. H. Heath Co., Limited who publish the CANADIAN POWER FARMER whereby we are able to offer that farm magazine together with our own weekly at the one price for both papers.

The CANADIAN POWER FARMER is Western Canada's biggest farm monthly. It is now in its twentieth year which means that it is thoroughly established throughout the West. It deals with the mechanical side of the farm. Every issue is full of helpful hints and experiences on the operation of all kinds of farm machinery from a washing-machine to a tractor. Its editor has just completed a trip of several months over Western Canada in a motor car for the purpose of studying the mechanical needs of the farmers. He visited the farmers, lived with them and worked with them. The results of his trip will appear during the next twelve months.

This offer may be withdrawn at any time. Without doubt your intention is to renew for this weekly, then why not take advantage now. Does It Pay The Farmer To Hold His Wheat

The question which constitutes the heading of this article has been asked and debated thousands of times and it still remains a moot question in the minds of many people. Commissions have investigated the grain marketing problem in practically all the great wheat growing countries of the world, and in this connection due consideration has been given to the effect on prices of the early marketing of the bulk of the wheat crop immediately following harvest. The prevailing opinion in the minds of most people has undoubtedly been that those farmers who, from force of circumstances, were compelled to rush their wheat to market were the losers thereby, while the man who could afford to hold it and watch the market stood to gain.

Practical and experienced farmers have become not only critical but rather resentful of writers in newspapers who essay the task of advising them what to do and what not to do. Arm chair farmers, like arm chair military strategists, are not popular, nor do they carry much weight, and possibly rightly so when they attempt to deal with practical farming problems. But in the matter of the marketing of wheat, men who never plowed a furrow or sowed an acre in their lives, but who have studied the question of marketing, the fluctuations of prices, and the harvest seasons around the world, are well qualified to speak in reply to the question at the head of this article. They are certainly in just as good a position to express an opinion in regard to it as any practical farmer, and possibly in a much better position to do so intelligently.

Of course, no hard and fast rule can be laid down because conditions vary from one year to another and circumstances arise beyond the control of mere mortals which upset any and all calculations and defy previous experience. For example, the man who sold wheat immediately following the outbreak of war in 1914 was the loser by so doing. It is, therefore, only possible to arrive at an intelligent answer to the question whether it pays the farmer to hold his wheat after harvest by taking the average run of prices over a period of normal years.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis has recently issued a set of most interesting charts, one of which seeks to throw some light on the question. One pair of charts shows the variations in prices on the Chicago and Minneapolis markets covering the 45-year period from 1876 to 1920; another shows the monthly range of cash wheat prices in Minneapolis during the last ten years, while a fourth chart, dealing with the normal pre-war years of 1902 to 1915, shows whether a farmer stood to gain or lose by holding or selling his wheat as indicated by the Chicago prices which prevailed from month to month throughout this ten-year period.

Taking the August price in each year as a basis, the chart in question shows the fluctuations in price above or below the August price in the succeeding months until August again came round. The chart reveals the amazing fact that in only 25 months out of the 120 in this ten-year period would it have paid the farmer to hold his wheat as compared with selling at the August price. In other words, in 95 months out of the 120 there was a loss by selling wheat at other than the August price. On the average every month showed a loss, and these losses vary from about five cents to fourteen cents a bushel. It is further pointed out that if September prices, instead of August, had been selected as the basis for making the comparison the conclusions would not be changed.

This highly interesting chart, based as it is on authoritative figures from official records, shows that by selling in September instead of August throughout these ten years the farmer would have sustained an average loss of 2.5 cents per bushel; selling in October instead of August his average loss would have been 7.2 cents per bushel; selling in November the loss would have been 12.3 cents; in December 12 cents; in January 13.8; in February 12.5 cents; in March 12.6 cents; in April 14.1 cents; in May 12.7 cents; in June 10.7 cents; and in July 8.1 cents.

In arriving at these figures allowance has, of course, been made for the cost of storage, shrinkage in weight, and interest charges, but a farmer holding his wheat must pay all these, and he cannot, therefore, merely compare actual market prices at the time of harvest with the price quoted three or six months later.

Selling promptly in the fall of every year appears, therefore, to yield the farmer the best average price, judging by the experience of these ten normal pre-war years. In some years, of course, he would gain by holding his wheat, but these are the exceptional years and not the rule. In fact, his chances of loss through holding instead of prompt selling in the fall appear to be about four to one.

Why does a corporation sometimes wait until there is nothing to receive before asking for a receipt?

MUCH ILL-HEALTH DUE TO BAD BLOOD

If the Blood Is Kept Rich and Red You Will Enjoy Health.

More disturbances to health is caused by weak, watery blood than most people have any idea of. When your blood is impoverished, the nerves suffer from lack of nourishment and you may be troubled with insomnia, neuritis, neuralgia or sciatica. Muscles subject to strain are under-nourished and you may have muscular rheumatism or lumbago. If your blood is thin and you begin to show symptoms of any of these disorders try building up the blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills have a special action on the blood and as it becomes enriched your health improves. The value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind is proved by the experience of Mr. D. J. McDonald, North River Bridge, N.S., who says: "For some years I suffered severely with headaches, pains in the back and a run-down condition. At times the pain in my back would be so bad that I would sit up in bed all night. From time to time doctors were treating me, but did not give me more than temporary relief. And then one day when I was suffering terribly a neighbor came to see me, and urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After taking two boxes I felt relief. I got five boxes more and before they were all gone I felt as though they were giving me new life in every way they built up and improved my health and strength. I am now working as a laborer in a pulp mill, ten hours a day and feeling none the worse after my day's work. I say with pleasure that this condition is due to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 5 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Planting Sockeye Eggs

Will Aid in Restoring Run of Fraser River.

Planting sockeye eggs, such as one plants potatoes or any other seed, is one of the new methods in use in connection with the artificial propagation of the king of salmon. The eggs are planted under gravel. This is akin to the conditions under which the fish are hatched by natural means and is expected to yield better results than were possible before. It is anticipated that this method will greatly aid in restoring the sockeye run of the Fraser River to a sound basis.

GUARD THE CHILDREN FROM AUTUMN COLDS

The Fall is the most severe season of the year for colds—one day is warm, the next, cold and wet, and unless the mother is on her guard, the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mothers' best friend in preventing or banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent colds, or if it does come on suddenly their prompt use will relieve the baby. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Takes Electricity From Air

New Generator Consists of Wire, Iron and Minerals.

Demonstrations have been made on the streets of Denver of a new electric generator that is claimed by the inventors to take electricity from the air.

The inventors are J. E. Ammann, of Denver, and his brother, C. E. Ammann, of Spokane, Wash.

To demonstrate, the brothers borrowed an old electric auto, took out the batteries and after roping their new "atmospheric generator" fast, they got in and rode off at a high speed.

"There is nothing inside the drum that moves; the contents consist only of iron, wire and minerals," says C. E. Ammann.

"It can be used to drive any electrical apparatus and can be made in any size."

The brothers are closely guarding their secret, and even take their "brain-child" when it is not in use, to their room in the Argonaut Hotel. So far the brothers have not offered to sell their proposition.

Electrical men in Denver are waiting "to be shown," but they grant the thing works.

Lace Trimmed Nightgown Of Crepe de Chine

It repeats the style tendency of the frock in the sashes that are tied at its side. These are made of double faced ribbons which show pale blue on one side and flesh on the other. The square cut décolletage is outlined with fine val lace and insertion and partly hidden under the fine mesh of the lace appears the narrow mesh which is tied in a dainty bow in the centre front.

Says Germany Must Go To Reparations Limit

Munich.—"We must go to the limit of our capacity with regard to reparations," Dr. Walter Rathenau, the German minister of reconstruction, declared before the congress of the Imperial Association of German Traders. "Complete fulfillment of the terms of the ultimatum will affect the world economically more severely than ourselves. Britain has three million and the United States six million unemployed. The more Germany must work the more the others cease working. What is needed is an international economic understanding."

The minister approved Winston Churchill's suggestion of co-operation as outlined in his Dunlop speech and said with regard to reparations: "We must give goods; the problem is to substitute products for gold. We are to have a further conference with France regarding arrangements for deliveries of gold marks to the amount of seven billion in the course of four and a half years."

Munich and Berlin Settle Dispute

Responsibility of Suppression of Newspapers Caused Contention.

Munich.—An agreement reached at Berlin on Sept. 24 between representatives of the Bavarian and the Central German Government has been adopted by the constitutional committee of the Bavarian Diet. This agreement is intended to effect an adjustment of the controversy which has been raging between Munich and Berlin for some time.

One of its provisions makes the authorities of individual German States responsible for the suspension, or suppression of newspapers. This was one of the principal causes of contention between the two Governments.

Refugees in Petrograd.

The Empire's Effort— And Sacrifice

One Man in Every Ten Laid Down Life In Great War.

From a return lately granted for the House of Commons, and published in the official Parliamentary report of May 5, we are now fully able to realize the magnitude of the effort made by the British Empire during the European war and how heavy was the sacrifice demanded of those who helped by land and sea in gaining the victory at the end of the long struggle. The total numbers of our sea and land forces that served during the war amounted to the huge total of something over nine millions of men; of these nine millions—nine millions, be it remembered, of the very pick of the Empire—no fewer than one man out of every ten laid down his life, having been killed in action, died of wounds, or died from disease due in some measure to the war. One man in every four was wounded, and one man out of every three became a casualty in one way or another—whether by death in action, from wounds or from disease, or by being wounded or taken prisoner. This is surely a very terrible proportion, and shows how and to what a dreadful extent the modern wars of nations have increased the casualties among those taking part in them, while the sacrifice also falls most heavily upon the very pick of the manhood of the opposing peoples.

Miller's Worm Powders are complete in themselves. They not only drive worms from the system, but repair the damage that worms cause and so improve the constitution that it speeds recovery from the disorders of the digestion that are the result of the work of these parasitic intruders. They do their work thoroughly and strength and soundness follow their use.

Lower Grain Rates From Montreal

Montreal.—At a meeting of the various shipping lines of Montreal it was decided to make a reduction of ten per cent. in the existing freight rates for grain being shipped from this port to points in the United Kingdom. This reduction comes, it is said, as the result of the scarcity of package freight.

Urges Aiding Austria

Hon. A. J. Balfour Appeals to All Countries For Help.

Geneva.—Speaking in the assembly of the League of Nations on a resolution expressing the regret of the assembly that the reconstruction of Austria's finances had been delayed for a reason it was hoped would shortly be removed, Right Hon. A. J. Balfour said the Allies had done all they could for the restoration of Austria. All of them had released their allies to that end, he recalled, and he hoped that the Austrian people would not lose their courage. He appealed to all the countries, in the general interests of Europe and for the credit of civilization to do all they could to enable Austria to regain her feet.

World Record For Altitude

Airman Attained Official Height of 40,800 Feet.

Dayton, Ohio.—Lieut. John A. MacReady, test pilot at McCook Field, shattered the world's altitude record, attaining an official height of 40,800 feet in the same laparic airplane used by Major Rudolph C. Schroeder, who set a record of 39,100 feet on February 28, 1920.

Lieut. MacReady was in the air one hour and forty-seven minutes, requiring all but a few minutes of the total flying time to reach his mark. At 39,000 feet, ice formed on his oxygen tank but he pressed on until the anti-meter registered 11,000 feet. At this point his engine coughed and died. He then glided safely to the ground.

Typhoon in Japan Kills Hundreds.

Tokio.—Several hundred persons have been killed by a typhoon in Central Japan, centring upon Nagoya, on the Island of Honshu, where a tidal wave destroyed crops and houses. Several steamers were sunk and many fishermen are missing.

its Quality Sells It.—The fact that so many thousands of intelligent people continue to use Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil speaks volumes for its healing efficiency. Ever since it was first introduced it has grown steadily in public favor, owing entirely to its manifold usefulness in relieving and healing sickness. As a specific for cuts, burns, scalds, and various inflammatory pains its record is beyond reproach.

Sixty-Three Days In Open Rowboat

Washington.—Sighted by Chesapeake Bay fishermen five miles off Norfolk, Va., in an open rowboat, in which they had been cruising the "Waters of the bay, and the Potomac River for sixty-three days, William A. Spencer, ex-soldier, and his ten-year-old daughter, Cora Eleanor, were later located by a police launch and brought to that port after a nation-wide search for weeks, following their mysterious disappearance from this city. Finding of the father and daughter was made known at police headquarters here after notification from the Norfolk authorities.

Our slogan for the coming year should be, "Buy at Home." Add to your own and your neighbor's prosperity by keeping the money circulating in our own district.

Winnipeg.—A reduction amounting to 20 per cent. on all rates over 50 cents per hundred pounds on livestock shipments from the prairie provinces to St. Paul and Chicago, has been announced here by the Canadian Pacific Railway. There is no reduction being made below 50 cents per hundred pounds. This new rate will become effective Oct. 8. The statement issued by the Canadian Pacific Railway says: In view of the fact that cattle are moving from the prairie provinces to St. Paul and Chicago, notwithstanding the Fordney tariff, it is reducing the rates on livestock in line with the reductions made by U.S. railways.

The following are quoted as samples of the new rate:

Moose Jaw to St. Paul 55 cents as against the present rate of 69 cents; to Chicago 77 cents against 96; Calgary and Edmonton to St. Paul, 70 1/2 against 88; to Chicago 93 as against $1.15.

There are probably no men living today, who during their school boy days, have not read Jules Verne's book, 20,000 Leagues Under The Sea. The book was always a popular one but in the days when it first came out it was looked upon as the outcome of a very fertile imagination. Many of the visions, as pictured in the book, have become a reality. The story has been filmed and will be shown here on Tuesday the 11th of October.

The Harvest-home Service held at the Horse Shoe School by Rev. E. Davidge, on Sunday last, was well attended and was over-brimming with interest and thanksgiving fervor. The schoolhouse was wondrously decorated with the produce of the soil—every spare nook and corner being used to advantage, the sum-total effect of which was inspiring and creative of an atmosphere of thanksgiving and worship. Mrs. H. Muddle presided at the organ and the singing was hearty and congregational. Both the children's story and the sermon hinged on the central thought of the necessity for a more vital contact with God and the need for a more fervent gratitude. While the offering was being taken Miss R. Cameron favored with a violin selection, which was very much appreciated. At the close of the service the vegetables, fruit, eggs and butter used for decorative purposes were handed into the keeping of the pastor and his wife. It made a car-full alright, but the cargo (and car) arrived in town in its entirety.

Heartfelt thanks and appreciation is extended to the decorating committee and to all who attended and helped to make this gathering the splendid success that it was. The recipients of the vegetables, etc., are extremely grateful for the manner in which their winter-time storehouse has been so effectually stocked.

There was a large attendance at both services, on Sunday, at the Co-operative Church. The building was tastefully decorated for the Harvest-home Festival held in the morning. Miss R. Cameron assisted with the musical part of the service.
